

Hospice of the Western Reserve and Stein Hospice Unite Under New Organizational Structure

Cleveland, Ohio (April 1, 2022) -- As of April 1, 2022, Hospice of the Western Reserve and Stein Hospice have joined together as one organization. Hospice of the Western Reserve, headquartered in Cleveland, is the leading provider of hospice and palliative care services for patients and their loved ones in Northeast Ohio. Stein Hospice in Sandusky has a service area encompassing Erie, Huron, Ottawa, Lorain, Sandusky, Seneca and surrounding counties.

Both Hospice of the Western Reserve and Stein Hospice have collaborated in the hospice and palliative care field for decades. Bill Finn, President and CEO of Hospice of the Western Reserve, praised retiring Stein Hospice CEO Jan Bucholz for her leadership and collaboration.

“Jan’s dedication and steadfast commitment to maintaining the highest standards of care have made a lasting impact. Her leadership has played an instrumental role in Stein’s reputation as a premier nonprofit provider of hospice and palliative care,” Finn said.

“We are in an increasingly competitive environment. This new partnership ensures future generations will continue to have access to the best and most comprehensive end-of-life services available anywhere. Together, we will build on our shared foundation of excellence to serve future generations with the compassionate care that has been a hallmark of both organizations for more than 40 years.”
